Follow-up: West Sac has no plans to phase-in water meters

■ For simplicity, City will wait until meters are installed everywhere before forcing residents to switch from flat-rate water billing

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Most West Sacramento homes now have water metering devices. But despite the drought, city officials don't plan to use the meters for water billing until around the time the last residential meters are installed around the year 2018.

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon explained to the News-Ledger:

"We're moving toward volumetric pricing, but only once we have that (installation) project complete. It's a much more involved pricing structure. We know it's going to require a significant amount of public education.

. . For a variety of reasons, it's much easier for the citizens to have a unified set of policies."

City officials believe the state water code required them to install and begin billing based customers at metered rates by last year, and they admit this city (like a number of others) is behind in meeting that goal. Using meters would

Villegas: bond is good for farming & levees

■ Delta counties consulted in writing of state water bond

OSCAR VILLEGAS,
Yolo County Supervisor
from West Sacramento

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Yolo County Supervisor Oscar Villegas says this region played a big role in deciding what to keep and what to throw away as the upcoming $7.2 billion state water bond was drafted for the November ballot. Villegas, who represents Clarksburg and most of West Sacramento, joined fellow Yolo supervisor Jim Provenza in a subcommittee that worked with other regional and state officials on the bond.

"Yolo County was intimately involved in the negotiations of what the bond ought to look like," he told the News-Ledger on Monday. "We were representing Yolo County on a coalition of Delta counties. There are five counties actively involved in protecting the Delta."

This coalition worked with state senators Darrell Steinberg and Lois Wolk and others officials involved in the process.

A citizen noticed the teeth and a few other small bones in the area north of West Sacramento at about 11 a.m.

A sheriff's department boat and coroner's office investigators responded.

Further information was not immediately available.

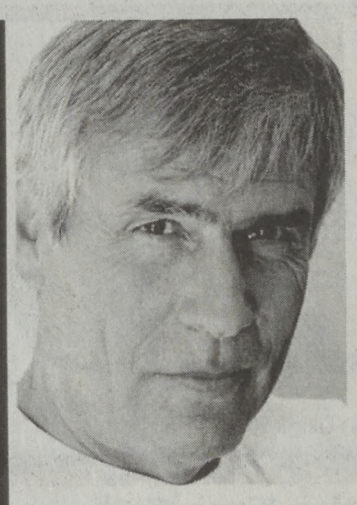
Gutter-flooding, and how a car can be too clean

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

The past couple of weeks the News-Ledger has run lengthy front page stories about how the statewide drought is affecting West Sacramento and its citizens. One of the articles talked about how about two-thirds of West Sacramento residences now have water meters, but that the city is still using the old "flat" rates to bill 93% of everyone in town, which means the city is actually out of compliance with state regulations governing such matters. In other words, the vast majority of our citizens are being neither financially rewarded for saving water nor penalized for using too much of it.

The other article talked about how City of West Sacramento water-saving rules which were once voluntary are now being made mandatory. For instance, lawn sprinklers now have to be used on an even/odd day system (and not at all on Mondays), it's illegal to wash down driveways, buildings, roofs and streets, and you can't be out there in the street or driveway washing your car unless you have a shut-off nozzle on your hose. But even though the city is cracking down on all this unnecessary waste of precious water, they're trying to do so in a very measured way, with actual penalties only occurring after the third violation of any of the above new rules, "not wanting to create a culture of informing on neighbors and a climate of punishment," which brings me to my little story.

Whether the city knows it or not, some of our citizens are getting pretty upset with those who are wasting water without any consequences. And for the third time this week, a News-Ledger subscriber has strolled (in one case, stormed) into my office wanting to know if there was something more the newspaper could do to get local residents to stop wasting water in what is fast becoming a very serious drought. One said she was going to do her part by writing a "scathing" letter to the editor about the water abuses going on in her condo complex; another thought it was all our fault for having not gotten on top of the story earlier; and the third had a very interesting suggestion indeed.

"The city finally getting around to giving someone a little ticket or something after they've been caught a bunch of times isn't going to change anything," said angry citizen number three. "I tell you what, I'll even be your eyes and ears for you, and every time I see someone flooding their gutters, I'll take a picture of the house where it's going on and then you put that picture right on the front page of your newspaper. Everyone knows everyone else in this town and that might actually get someone's attention!"

Anyway, I was mentioning all this to a longtime resident of West Sacramento, and our conversation went a little something like this:

"I don't blame some of your readers for being really pissed off that too many people in this town don't even seem to know we're having a drought, much less taking it seriously. And if you're like me, I bet you have people in your own neighborhood who have simply been used to having green grass and clean cars all their life, and they're not going to change. And it's pretty easy to tell who is who, since if you have a lush green yard in August in the middle of a drought, then you are simply watering it too often."

"My dad loved to have really green grass in both his front and back yards, and he always had the cleanest car in town," I said, "so I kind of get what that is all about."

"Well, to tell you the truth," said my friend, "when it comes to global warming and all the drastic climate change that is going on all over the world, most people in the country don't really understand what is coming down the road. Just think of what things are going to be like next year here in California if we get as little rain as we did this year? That's when the rubber will really start hitting the road. You know, a lot of scientists actually think we have already crossed the point of no return when it comes to all the greenhouse gases our cars, factories, utilities and appliances are throwing up into the atmosphere. And if you think the United States is bad, God only knows what countries like China, Russia and India are doing to the environment. And if we are truly in a drought pattern here in California that ends up lasting for years, then having a green yard and a clean car are going to be the very least of our worries."

"So, what do you think of that idea about putting pictures of the houses of gutter flooders on the front page of the newspaper?" I asked with interest.

"Well, it would sure make me turn off my sprinkler system and start watering everything by hand every other evening after the sun has gone down!"

For the third time this week, a News-Ledger subscriber has strolled (in one case, stormed) into my office wanting to know if there was something more the newspaper could do to get local residents to stop wasting water in what is fast becoming a very serious drought.

Get into 'Overdrive': learn about free e-books

"I'm bored!"

Every parent has heard this during summer vacation or while traveling with kids. Adults get bored, too. Traveling usually involves time spent sitting, either waiting in an airport or sitting on a train or a plane or in a car. For readers this means having time to read (that's a good thing), and packing a selection of books to insure that there is enough to last the whole trip (that's not such a good thing). Maybe it's that mystery you never seem to have time to read at home, or the biography that has over 800 pages and weighs so much, or books from your child's summer reading list. Packing several books can weigh down your suitcase. The prospect of carrying an extra 10-20 pounds of books can be tiring and buying new books, including ebooks, is expensive.

The library has a solution for that – free ebooks!

If you have a tablet or laptop computer with wifi access and a library card you can download ebooks and audiobooks to your device free of charge for a three-week loan. It's just like going to the library to check out books, but you don't have to leave your home. The extensive selection of available titles includes mysteries, romance novels, science fiction, classical literature, biographies, business and careers, history, and other nonfiction. Children's and young adult books are also available.

All you need to do is download an app called Overdrive to your device and follow simple instructions to search for and check out the available titles. Detailed information for a variety of electronic devices is available at the library and online at: http://help.overdrive.com/customer/portal/topics/634601-categories/articles.

Learn more about Overdrive at the Arthur F. Turner Community Library, 1212 Merkely Avenue, West Sacramento, during our 5th Anniversary Party on October 11, 2014, from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. Join us for fun and information.

Don't have a mobile device? Want to learn more about the different types available? Would you like to get hands-on experience? The Turner Community Library will hold a Mobile Device Test Drive workshop, on Thursday, August 28, at 6:00 p.m. For more information call 916-375-6465.

County program makes it cheaper to hire workers from Yolo

From the County of Yolo

Employers in Yolo County now have an opportunity to cut employment costs by hiring Yolo County residents through the county's Subsidized Employment Program. This new program, administered through the Yolo County Department of Employment & Social Services, incentivizes local employers while assisting eligible low-income job seekers otherwise unable to find employment.

The Subsidized Employment Program reimburses participating employers eligible employee wages for up to a year through the CalWORKs Employment Services Program. Jobs made available through the program are not meant to displace current employees, and may be, but are not limited to, entry level positions. While the Yolo County Department of Employment & Social Services provides potential employee applicants to participating employers, the employer is fully in control of deciding who to hire. The employee is also responsible for providing supervision and training.

"While the economy is improving, these are still challenging times for many," said Yolo County Board of Supervisors Chair Don Saylor in a press release. "The Subsidized Employment Program will help businesses expand capacity while helping the unemployed get back into the workforce."

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS
BY SAM STRUCKHOFF

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Draft Day" (PG-13) -- On the morning of the NFL draft, the general manager of the beleaguered Cleveland Browns (Kevin Costner) faces 12 grueling hours of high-stakes decision making, with little to go on but instinct. He has to pick which athletes to pull onto his team, with each choice affecting the life of a young athlete. He's second-guessed on all sides, especially by the team's hot-head coach (Denis Leary).

Fortunately, the movie isn't all statistics and business talk. Director Ivan Reitman ("Ghostbusters" and "Up in the Air") gives things the right touch -- even in this tense atmosphere, there's room for humanity and humor. Costner plays the sports-boss role like a champion.

"Night Moves" (R) -- Three environmentalists blow up a hydroelectric dam with a homemade bomb, then contend with consequences they didn't expect. Josh (Jesse Eisenberg), the leader, is silent and calculating. Dena (Dakota Fanning) comes from an upper-crust family, but she's not interested in wealth.

Amy Poehler in 'They Came Together'

Ex-Marine Harmon (Peter Sarsgaard) is the only radical who seems to revel in the defiance and destruction. After the blast, they split up and lay low -- paranoia stalking each one.

This movie is a slow boil. The suspense is palpable, but not in your face. The exact beliefs and motives of the three eco-terrorists aren't really given in detail. It's a story meant to leave you questioning. Was it worth it? Even the bombers are left without a clear answer.

"They Came Together" (R) -- Paul Rudd and Amy Poehler throw chemistry at each other in this dead-on parody of the Hollywood romantic comedy. You know the drill: They can't stand each other at first, then love pulls them together, then something arbitrarily pulls them apart so they have to publicly declare their love and get back together at the end. The movie maybe goes too far in pointing out just how many tropes and cliches it has borrowed from the old formula. Director David Wain ("Role Models" and "Wet Hot American Summer") assembles his extensive crew of very funny friends to fill the cast.

"Moms' Night Out" (PG) -- Looking for a family comedy that takes mom's side, but ends up confirming her darkest fears at the same time? This faith-based feature follows Allyson (Sarah Drew), a harried suburban mother of three who plans a desperately needed night of fun with her best friend (Andrea Logan White) and their pastor's wife (Patricia Heaton). The ladies fear that their families will collapse into chaos and danger without them, and that's pretty much what happens. The moms' night out turns into a sometimes-funny frenzy of anxiety and adventure, pushing the quiet lesson that moms should be glad to stay at home.

"Hitchcock's Partner in Suspense: The Life of Screenwriter Charles Bennett" edited by John Charles Bennett
(University Press of Kentucky, $40)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

In 1928, British actor Charles Bennett's play "Blackmail," starring Tallulah Bankhead, opened in London to critical acclaim. The following year, Bennett collaborated with Alfred Hitchcock in the film version of his play. The movie is credited as being the first British sound film ever produced, and the first film project that involved both Hitchcock and Bennett.

They eventually would make six British motion pictures together, including four major classics: "The Man Who Knew Too Much" (1934), "The 39 Steps" (1935), "Secret Agent" (1936) and "Sabotage" (1936). Bennett's British film work brought him to the attention of Hollywood. His first American project was "The Adventures of Marco Polo" released in 1938, and about three dozen additional film projects followed.

Bennett had a colorful career that spanned the history of cinema from the Silent Era to the 1990s. He was an extraordinary man who excelled as an actor, director, playwright, film and television writer, and as a novelist. During the 1980s, Bennett began compiling what eventually would become his autobiography. Although he died before it was completed, his son, John Charles Bennett, edited it for publication. The result is a fascinating behind-the-screens look at the man who helped develop Hitchcock's signature style, and in a very real sense, advance modern cinema.

When Bennett and Hitchcock began their collaboration, they agreed from the start that the fundamental thing was to get the story line first, to know the ending before the beginning and then construct the story in a suspenseful, meaningful way. Their method obviously worked, since they produced some of the most memorable stories ever filmed.

With an introduction by Bennett's son, this is an intimate narrative by a most remarkable figure, a man who helped define 20th-century entertainment. Bennett died in Los Angeles in 1995. He was 95 years old.

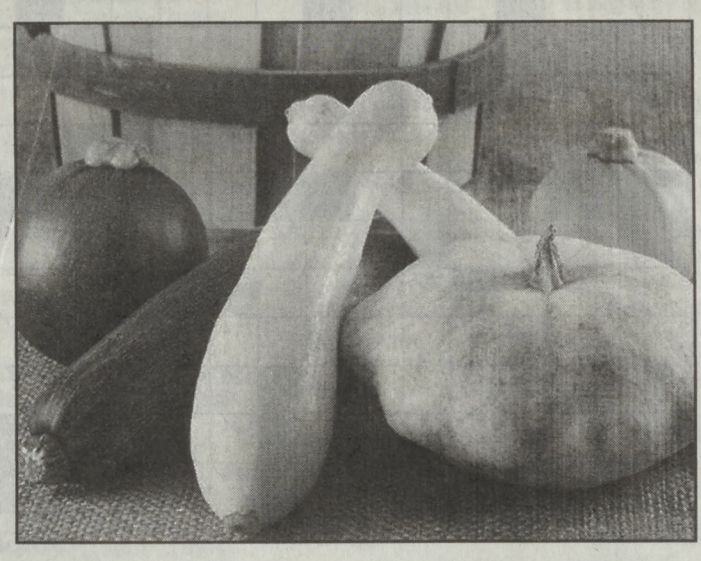
The Kitchen Diva BY Angela Shelf Medearis

A Favorite Sister



Among all the fruits and vegetables that are abundant in summer, there is a group of gourds literally named after the season. Summer squash is a colorful family of yellow, patty pan, scalloped and zucchini squash that flower prolifically and fruit throughout the warm months.

This particular clan got its name due to its short shelf life, which differs from the hard-skinned, long-lasting winter squashes such as butternut or acorn. In essence, all summer squash are really just a hard-rind squash that is picked in its immature state

Squash gets its name from an Indian word, "askutasquash," meaning raw or uncooked. It's believed that Native Americans were growing varieties of squash as one of their "Three Sisters" crops: a combination of corn, beans and squash grown together in a mound. This was to take advantage of their symbiotic relationship. The corn provided a structure on which the beans could grow, the beans nourished the soil with nitrogen, and the squash plant provided shade for the planting bed. These indigenous people then introduced the plant to the early European settlers. But while squash as a group has its roots firmly in the Americas, zucchini, as we know it now, was developed as a variety by the Italians, who eat it in countless preparations.

In much of the country, most types of summer squash are relatively easy to establish in the home garden. Often, home gardeners find themselves overwhelmed with a continuous supply of the crop. Hence, the numerous recipes for squash this and zucchini that. And while most of us are familiar with crook-neck squash or zucchini, summer is the time to try the lesser-known varieties that are available as well.

Because the fruit of the summer squash grows fast once it starts, a common mistake is picking them too late. In their young state, still relatively small, the flesh and skin are tender, and the seeds undeveloped, yielding the most delicious fruit. So, when growing your own squash, check your plants daily once flowering begins, and harvest the fruit early. When buying them at the store, choose the smallest specimens with well-colored skin.

Because summer squash has such a mild flavor, it lends itself to many dishes, both savory and sweet. And while summer squash most often is eaten cooked, fresh tender squash is delicious in many raw preparations as well. For an unusual way to prepare squash, try my recipe for Summer Squash with Sweet Corn and Orzo Pasta. Try using different types of summer squash. It's delicious hot or cold!

SUMMER SQUASH WITH ORZO PASTA

1 (16 ounce) box of orzo pasta
4 summer squash (cousa, zephyr, costata romanesco and round zucchini)
3 ears of sweet corn
4 tablespoons olive oil
3 green onions, green and white parts, root ends discarded, chopped
3 cloves of garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon salt plus 1/2 tablespoon more for the pasta water
1 teaspoon black pepper
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 large tomatoes, diced
Juice of 1 large lemon
1 bunch of fresh basil, torn
Shaved Parmesan cheese

1. On high heat, cover a large pot of water (per package directions for the orzo pasta) and bring to a boil. Meanwhile, rinse squash and trim off ends. Slice in half, lengthwise and then crosswise into half moons of the same size, so that they cook evenly. Set aside.
2. Peel back corn husk and silky tassles. Pop husk off the cob and discard it. Place an ear of corn, cut side down, in a shallow bowl, in the circle of a Bundt cake pan, or on a cutting board. Hold it near the top of the ear, and using a sharp knife, start at the top and cut downward with a gentle sawing motion; cut until all the corn is removed. Reserve the corn cobs to place in pasta water for more corn flavor, if desired.
3. When pasta water comes to boil, add 1/2 tablespoon salt, pasta and the naked cobs to the boiling water. Cook, uncovered, per package directions.
4. In a large saute pan on medium-high heat, add two tablespoons olive oil. Add onion and garlic, salt, pepper, nutmeg and cayenne pepper. Saute 2 minutes. Add the squash and corn. Saute until tender, about 5 to 7 minutes. Turn off heat.
5. Drain the cooked pasta. In a large bowl, mix pasta with the squash mixture and toss with the tomatoes, lemon juice and remaining olive oil. Add additional salt and pepper, as needed. Sprinkle the basil leaves and Parmesan on top. Serves 4.

WATER METERS from page one cities to reward water-savers and penalize heavy users as cities try to meet Governor Brown's goal of cutting water use by 20 percent.

West Sacramento, like a lot of cities, is still trying to get meters in to a lot of older homes that were built without the devices.

"We're making pretty steady progress," said Cabaldon. "The city was on track to make the 2013 deadline five or eight years ago. Then the recession hit. The one bright spot was we got some stimulus money to install meters in Bryte. But when we were faced with cutting core city services during the recession, we could not on our own make the millions of dollars in investment to finish the project by deadline."

Public Works Director Denix Anbiah told the News-Ledger earlier that about 8,400 of the city's 12,615 residential addresses now have water meters in place. But switching from flat-rate to metered billing remains voluntarily, and only 910 of those homes have requested metered billing so far.

Anbiah said the city won't face penalties from the state or feds because it will be in compliance with the water code's metering requirements by 2018 – two years before it needs to renegotiate its Central Valley Water Project contract.

Cabaldon said, metering issue aside, that West Sacramento is meeting its 20 percent target for conservation.

"We're doing pretty darned well," said the mayor. "The city as a whole has hit our 20 percent target, and the city government is even higher than that. We expect the next set of numbers to be even better. We're one of the regional leaders in conservation, except that this is one of the most severe droughts in history."

If the drought isn't busted this winter, he added, the state may need to face a whole new level of water conservation.

"There was a frenzy of activity in the last week as the deadline approached and there was a need to get something before the governor," said Villegas."

So what's in the bond? What will voters be funding if they pass it?

"There's a series of different things," said Villegas. "The biggest is water storage, which I think everybody agrees is a huge need. It will (also) go for water recycling, groundwater cleanup, restoration in the Delta and for flood protection."

Also important is what isn't in it, said Villegas. He feels that the water bond, as drafted, will avoid funding the controversial "canal" project meant to ship water from the Delta area to Southern California.

"We did not want this bond to be used for that," Villegas said. So the canal plan remains alive, but separate.

"The other thing we pushed for was funding for the Delta Conservancy," he added. "This involves restoration work needed in the Delta, for the health of the Delta habitat as well as for the levees. Another thing I think is critical is that there is language included for agricultural sustainability. There is so much ag land in Yolo that is going to be affected by the redistribution of water. Bond funds could be used for ag sustainability."

Villegas said he agrees with Senator Wolk's view that the bill "is not perfect, but it's a lot better than what we had." And he recommends a "yes" vote on it in November, saying it will help the area's farming, flood protection and water supply.

harvest fruit trees from Bakersfield to Winters settling in Broderick. He attended one year of high school in Woodland. He was not able to graduate, having to take care of the family since his dad was a construction worker and gone for long periods of time. Jim worked at various auto dealers as a front-end mechanic. He was a long-term resident of West Sacramento and founding member of the Washington Outboard Club.

He enjoyed water skiing, camping with friends and dancing. Later in life he enjoyed cruises with Millie and various family members. Watching western movies, listening to the Blues, Jerry Lee Lewis and sitting in the garage watching the neighborhood were also activities he liked. He would often say he was always busy "doing nothing" and "you can never retire too young."

After surviving an aneurism and bladder cancer, he died from pancreatic cancer. A memorial is planned for Saturday, September 13th from 3:00 – 6:00 PM at the West Sacramento Moose Lodge, 3240 Jefferson Boulevard, "with possible mud-wrestling between ex-wives and girlfriends if time allows."

At Yolo Hospice, we'll see him as the dancer, the jokester, the best friend, and we'll be there with comfort and expert care. Because the care we deliver is about him, about who's in his life, and about helping him live all of it more fully.

UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER. On October 17, 2014, at 1:00pm, Cal-western Reconveyance Llc, as duly appointed trustee under and pursuant to Deed of Trust recorded March 09, 2009, as Inst. Richardson, Wife And Husband, will sell at public auction to highest bidder for cash, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, a check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, savings association, or savings bank specified in section 5102 of the financial code and authorized to do business in this state: At the north entrance to the west sacramento city hall, 1110 W. Capitol Avenue West Sacramento, California, all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by it under said Deed of Trust in the property situated in said County and State described as: Completely described in said deed of trust The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 415 Mckinley Way Aka 415 W Mckinley Way Aka 415 Mckinley Way West West Sacramento CA 95691 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. Said sale will be held, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, condition or encumbrances, including fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, to pay the remaining principal sums of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust. The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (800)280-2832 or visit the Internet Web Site, www.auction.com, using the file number assigned to this case 1385601-31. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web Site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. FOR SALES INFORMATION: (800)280-2832 Cal-Western Reconveyance LLC, 525 East Main Street, P.O. Box 22004, El Cajon, CA 92022-9004 Dated: August 05, 2014. (DLPP-439291 08/13/14, 08/20/14, 08/27/14)

All Charities Raffle

The annual "All Charities Raffle" has formed again under the "mother ship" of the West Sacramento Foundation this year. Many local sports leagues and nonprofits are participating. They're selling $10 raffle tickets (each group gets to keep $9 from each ticket) and ticket buyers will have a chance to win any of a big list of prizes, at a raffle later this fall.

Prizes include a week-long stay in a condo in Puerto Rico, a week at a Puerto Rico condo, use of a large house on Lake Eaglebright, a $500 shopping spree at Ikea, use of a 20-person luxury suite at a River Cats game, a free Whitey's Jolly Kone hamburger combo every day for a year, a big screen TV, a personal brewing session at Yolo Brewery and more.

One of the participating charities, the West Sacramento Historical Society, is using its ticket proceeds to fund the preservation of News-Ledger archives on microfilm or digital media. They're at 374-1849.

For more raffle information, contact your favorite local charity or visit www.westsacfoundation.org.
